into our 31st year

High inventory and weakening demand has put pressure on global rubber price. However, the cyclical commodity continues to attract investment as traditional rubber growing countries like Thailand and Malaysia makes way to their emerging neighbours like Cambodia and Myanmar.

What's in store for the rubber sector in the global and regional context? What are the incentives and environment in new non-traditional rubber growing countries? What are the agronomic challenges and developments in rubber cultivation?

CMT's 4th RubberPLANT Summit zooms into vital issues such as price movement, plantation techniques and productivity!

Highlights:

- Global rubber market outlook and pricing forecast
- Economic land concession in Cambodia – issues and challenges
- Exploring soil condition and agronomics in non-traditional zones
- Newest rubber producing countries in South East Asia – Myanmar & Laos
- Re-establishment of Sri Lanka: Developing natural rubber on a commercial scale
- Financing agri-investment in frontier markets
- Yield and plantation management

And more!
