Increasing beverage consumptions and diversifications to more 'sensitive' categories like spirits and dairy protects are shifting packaging development to be more functional and advance. Although optimistic, the recently enacted soda tax, new virgin PET capacity startups and drive towards sustainable packaging options are key challenges facing the Mexican PET packaging market.

Returning for the 12th consecutive year, LAPET will address the latest market analysis, commercial outlook, product and technology developments sweeping the PET sector.

Highlights

- Global capacity and potential implications to resin trade
- Shale gas glut in Mexico: What does it mean for the petrochemical industry?
- Polyester intermediates: market forecast, challenges and analysis
- Focus on sustainability and recycling issues & technologies
- Potential PET packaging trends: thermoformed trays, beer, liquor, milk
- Substitute of PET with PEF: Issues & challenges
- Innovation in preform/bottling technologies
