

13th LAPET

Latin America PET Markets, Applications & Recycling
21 - 22 Oct 2015 | Mexico City, Mexico

Seeking Opportunities & Staying Competitive in a Challenging Time

Mexico, the epicenter of the PET conversion boom in Latin America is maintaining momentum driven by high consumption of soft drinks and bottled water. However, weaker consumption, stagnant economies and falling prices are some of the current challenges impacting the PET packaging industries in Latin America and globally. How are the Mexican converters facing with demand and supply against a background of falling crude and PET price? How far is packaging processes adapting to consumers personalization? What are the trends and opportunities in thermoforming?

A one-stop platform for the Mexico's PET value chain, 13th LAPET will share insights on the market dynamics, design innovations and sustainability trends facing the PET packaging arena.

Highlights:

- Global outlook for PET supply, demand and trade dynamics
- Identifying innovations and trends in bottling, thermoforming, polyester film, etc.
- Assessing polyester intermediates in relation with the falling crude price
- Sustainable packaging developments and waste to value proposition
- Advances in PET specialty resin and conversion technologies
