

Consumer demand for easy packaging, innovative bottles and greener solutions are driving new advancements globally in PET bottling and packaging. Fast emerging thermoform sheet business and recycling sector also holds much opportunities for the PET value chain. However, PET resin prices continue to dive; failing to keep pace with consumption. Weak oil price and falling feedstock prices are some of the factors dampening the supply side of the PET business. In a surplus market, where are the growth opportunities for the Middle East PET industry? Will promising African markets mitigate the overcapacity scenario within the region? Does low price equals to more conversion to PET based packaging?
